

Logan Huffman

2008 TRCHF Inductee

Logan Huffman was born July 31, 1918 in Turnersville, Texas on the family ranch. He was a natural born horseman and horse trader. He served in the army and also worked at General Tire in Waco, while trading cattle and horses in his days off. In 1960 his weekly buck-outs turned into a full blown rodeo company, Huffman Rodeo Company, that campaigned throughout Texas. Known for his rank bulls like Little Stranger, with only two qualified rides in seven years; Domino, only one qualified ride in five years and seldom ridden Old Yeller. He continued to hold buckouts every Wednesday night and Sunday afternoon. It was there that cowboys and cowgirls from throughout Central Texas had the opportunity to develop their rodeo skills. Logan began breeding bucking bulls from Spotted Fever, one of his favorites. Logan and Jim Gibbs put Spotted Fever on a set of cows Jim owned. Jimmie and Bud Monroe have a herd of spotted cows that have produced a “slew” of National Finals Rodeo bulls to this day. At one time Logan was bucking ten of his calves. Logan sold out of the rodeo business in 1978 to Beutler & Son. Though known as a “bull man”, his bucking horse Brown Bomber was runner-up for Saddle Bronc of the Year in the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association after Jiggs Beutler had bought him. Never short on try, one time he had some new horses to buck and no riders showed up. You guessed it, Logan just mounted them out and only said he was “sure sore for a day or two.”

Logan Huffman was definitely “one of a kind”. Logan passed away on February 19, 2004, but will remain a legend to all those who knew him for years to come. In his honor, the Central Texas Youth Rodeo Association produced a Logan Huffman Memorial Rodeo in McGregor, TX
