

Pete Davis

Ranch Life

Pete grew up in Kerr County. He spent much of his early summers learning to work cattle on his great uncle's farm (Ashe called it) in Montgomery County. In his middle 20's he started working on The Aime Frank Real ranch in the middle southern part of Kerr County where he was employed as a hunting guide and ranch hand. He then worked for several hunting companies as a professional guide and did ranch management, his training stemming from his college training and early life experiences.

He moved to Kimble County where he built a small ranch "from the ground up." He built two houses, a barn, and working pens for goats, all of which he built with his own hands. Pete raised meat goats and did some day work for local ranches. Unfortunately, he was forced to sell off his dream, not unlike other ranchers, to pay bills, mainly medical.

Pete then began full time work for the Lemon Ranch with whom he had done day work for. He has worked there for 12 years and lives on the property with his wife, DJ. He loves being in God's creations and detest cities. His poetry, which he began writing in 1992, reflects his love of the Lord and history.
